PROVA DE LÍNGUA INGLESATHE STORY OF THE ARAL SEA

01 April 2010 - One Sunday afternoon in
02 Kazakhstan last August, a group of fishermen met 03 for a celebration. They were on the shore of the 04 North Aral Sea. They brought food to eat, and they 05 had races and throwing contests. Afterwards, they 06 relaxed, telling stories and singing songs about the 07 Aral Sea and fishing and how much they loved both 08 of these things.

09 Once, the Aral Sea in Central Asia was the 10 fourth largest lake in the world. However, it has 11 almost disappeared because of irrigation and 12 drought. In 2005, the Kazakh government and the 13 World Bank built a dam that separated the northern 14 and southern parts of the sea. The northern part of 15 the Aral Sea has started to recover. There are fish
16 in the water and for the past four years, fishermen
17 have come to celebrate.

18 Philip Micklin is a scientist who has been 19 studying the sea since the 1980s. 'Nature can come
20 back,' he says.

21 October 2014 - Satellite images from this week
22 show that the eastern part of the Aral Sea is 23 completely dry. 'It is likely the first time it has 24 completely dried up in 600 years,' said expert Philip 25 Micklin.

26 The Aral Sea once had an area of 67,300
27 square kilometres. Two of Central Asia's biggest 28 rivers, the Amu Darya and the Syr Darya, flowed
28 into the Sea. This means that it was actually a 30 freshwater lake, not a seawater lake. But it was so
31 big it was called a sea. The Aral Sea used to be a 32 busy place. Almost 20 percent of the Soviet Union's 33 fish came from here and 40,000 people used to 34 work near the lake. As the lake dried up, it
35 separated into different parts. The eastern part
36 nearly dried up in 2009 but it recovered in 2010
37 after some rain. Now, it's completely dry.

38 June 2015 - Yusup Kamalov is a scientist from 39 Uzbekistan. I am standing with him looking at a 40 huge desert. Except that it's not like any other 41 desert – fifty years ago the southern shore of the 42 Aral Sea was right where we stand. Now it is 80
43 kilometers away to the northwest. We set off to 44 drive to the water. On the way, we pass oil and 45 natural gas rigs standing on the sand. According to 46 Kamalov, each year there are a few more. 'Can you 47 imagine,' he says, 'that 40 years ago the water was 48 30 meters deep right here.' We finally arrive at the 49 edge of the lake, which is so salty that no fish can 50 live in it.

51 'This is what the end of the world looks like,'
52 says Kamalov.
