PROVA DE LÍNGUA INGLESA*SOUND MEMORIES

01 We all have had the experience of hearing
 02 a song and remembering that romantic dance under 03 the stars at school. Songs are linked to special
 04 people. Songs aren't the only sounds that remind us
 05 of the past, though. We remember our schooldays
 06 when we hear the sound of someone writing on a
 07 blackboard or a bell announcing break. The sound
 08 of fireworks reminds us of long-forgotten holiday
 09 celebrations with the family.

10 The sound-memory relationship is just as 11 important for animals as it was for primitive human 12 beings. For example, the sound of a breaking 13 branch might signal the approach of a predator, and 14 how loud that sound is reflects the size of the 15 branch. This in turn reflects the size of the predator.
 16 However, this isn't learned each time it occurs, but 17 rather through the memory of past experiences.
 18 Animals also recognize the voices of their mothers
 19 and other members of their group.

20 The sense of sound is basic for survival.
 21 Sound is linked to memories of when it was heard
 22 before, and what it meant for the group. We still use 23 sound memories in our daily lives. For example, we 24 can recognize the sound of the engine of the family
 25 car as it drives up to the house or the steps of a
 26 family member as she walks up to the door. Sound 27 memories are also useful for our own safety.

28 For example, when we hear the sound of a
 29 car in the street, we are unconsciously able to judge
 30 from what direction it is coming or if it has already 31 passed us and is going further away, allowing us to 32 cross the street safely without seeing the car. These 33 abilities are learned from our past experiences; our 34 memories of similar situations.
